FROM WASHINGTON.

The Coinage Bill Signed by the President—Our Government and the Paraguay War—The Kansas Judgeship, &c.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Feb. 23.

The President has approved the Coinage bill.

Recent events in Paris having occupied the attention of the Administration; a formal application has been sent to Congress for an appropriation of $13,000 for the pay of an Envoy Extraordinary to that country; and for nearly $2,000 for his Secretary of Legation and Interpreter.

The Kansas Judgeship question was warmly debated for more than three hours by the Senate in secret session to-day. A motion to postpone the nomination of Mr. HARMON until after the 4th of March failed by one majority. The discussion will be resumed to-morrow.

The latest accounts from Florida state that the pursuit of the Indians has been so far successful.

Correspondence will be published to-morrow relative to the recent assertion that Mr. BROOKS' death was caused by the ignorance of his physician. Letters from Senator BIGLER, Messrs. KEITT, ORR, McQUEEN, and CORBIN show that the statement has no foundation in truth.

The sugar-cane cuttings brought by the Relief prove nearly worthless, not more than one box out of six being good.

The municipal election at Georgetown to-day was signalized by some fighting, but no one was seriously injured. The Anti-Know-Nothings are probably successful.

Washington Matters.

Mr. BUCHANAN's nephew, it is stated, is to be his Private Secretary. His niece, Miss LANE, will preside at the White House.

Vice-President BRECKINRIDGE is in Philadelphia.

J. GLANCY JONES is very sick in Washington. It is reported that he has peremptorily declined a place in the Cabinet.

THE NEW CABINET.

From the Evening Post.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Feb. 23, 1857.

Mr. ALEXANDER, of New-Jersey, late Democratic candidate for Governor, has been invited by Mr. BUCHANAN to become Postmaster-General, and has accepted. GLANCY JONES has declined the appointment. The other names, as given in the Washington Union of the 19th inst., from CASS down, are correct.

Mr. BUCHANAN's cabinet, then, will be constituted as follows:

LEWIS CASS, Secretary of State.
HOWELL COBB, Secretary of the Treasury.
JOHN B. FLOYD, Secretary of War.
A. V. BROWN, Secretary of the Navy.
JACOB THOMPSON, Secretary of the Interior.
WM. C. ALEXANDER, Postmaster-General.
ISAAC TOUCEY, Attorney-General.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS—THE MEXICAN TREATY.

From the Journal of Commerce.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Feb. 20.

Private letters from Mexico have been received here, which state that a highly important treaty has been, or is about to be, concluded between Mr. FORSYTH, our Minister, and the Mexican Government, whereby a large share of Mexican Territory, embracing the whole of the State of Sonora, is to be ceded to the United States, for the sum of $15,000,000—$6,000,000 to go towards the payment of Mexican claims. Certain concessions in favor of American commerce are also embraced in the treaty.

There is probably some basis for these rumors, for a private letter from Mr. FORSYTH himself, to a gentleman here, states that he was about to close an important treaty—not naming the subject.

The present Administration had intended and hoped to settle in a most satisfactory manner every pending question with any foreign country before the close of this term, and they may yet consummate this end in regard to Mexico.

POSITION AND VIEWS OF GENERAL CASS.

From the Courier and Enquirer.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Feb. 21.

I informed you in a brief line last night of the gratifying position taken by General CASS. Premier elect, in an earnest debate of the Senate. The venerable Statesman declared, in substance, that he should not carry into the Administration which is to rule the country for the next four years, the inevitable war policy with Great Britain, but should favor peace not only with our foster-mother but with all the world. I need not say that the announcement has produced a very agreeable and tranquillizing sensation.

It is construed as furnishing a guarantee that the foreign policy of the Government will be conducted upon principles adverse to filibusterism. If Gen. CASS adheres to his present resolution he will require and receive the support of the Republicans against that incendiary wing of his own party which finds its aliment and home in agitation.

United States Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Feb. 23.

The Chief Justice announced that no argument would be heard after Friday, the 27th inst., and that the Court would then adjourn until Friday, March 6.

No. 71—Patrick Burke, plaintiff, vs. Wm. W. Gaines and Wife.—Error to the Supreme Court of Kansas. Chief Justice TANEY delivered the opinion of the Court, dismissing the cause for want of jurisdiction.

No. 146—John McCullough et al., plaintiffs, vs. Gurnsey F. Roots et al.—Argument commenced for plaintiffs, and continued for defendants.

XXXIVth Congress....Second Session.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Monday, Feb. 23.

NEW SENATORS.

Mr. CASS presented the credentials of Mr. CHANDLER, and Mr. HUNTER those of Mr. MASON, severally elected Senators from Michigan and Virginia, for six years from the 4th of March next.

Mr. FOSTER presented the credentials of JAMES DIXON as Senator from Connecticut, for six years from the 4th of March next.

HOME VALUATION.

The bill to amend the Tariff Act of 1846, with a view to perfect the Home valuation principle, was passed. This bill was published about a week ago.

THE SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH.

The Submarine Telegraph bill was then taken up.

Mr. THOMPKINS, of Kentucky, opposed the bill, saying that DEAN SWIFT once said, "All that was required in fishing was to have a fool at one end of the line and a worm at the other;" but if we establish this telegraph we shall have a fool at our end and there will be a snake at the other. [Laughter.]

Mr. TOOMBS commenced a speech against the bill, when the hour for going into Executive session as previously arranged having arrived.

Mr. RUSK moved an extension of time, in order to dispose of the pending subject.

Mr. BUTLER objected, saying, so far as he was concerned, the question should not be taken without full discussion.

The Senate then went into Executive session, and subsequently adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Feb. 23.

THE DEFICIENCY BILL PASSED.

The House passed the bill to supply deficiencies in appropriations, including $250,000 for printing, and nearly $168,000 for books to new members. The latter item was carried by three majority, although on Saturday only 77 votes were recorded in its favor.

SOUTH CAROLINA CLAIMS.

The House passed the bill to pay a company of South Carolina Volunteers for services in the War of 1812.

APPROPRIATIONS.

The Legislative, Executive and Judical Appropriation bill was taken up.

Mr. TAPPAN moved to strike out the sum of $30,000 compensation for the Kansas Legislature, saying that he did it for the reason that the House has ascertained and declared that the body was a usurpation.

Mr. WHITFIELD replied that this money was to pay members to be elected in the future. The people of Kansas being economical, there was enough funds from the appropriation, under organic law, to pay the members of the present Legislature.

Mr. WASHBURNE, of Maine, took the ground that if the House vote this appropriation they would stultify themselves, and in effect, declare the Legislature legal,—contrary to their former expressed opinion.

Mr. LETCHER reminded Mr. WASHBURNE of the fact that the same House that decided Mr. WHITFIELD not duly elected, recently by solemn vote said he was entitled to a seat in pursuance of law.

Mr. HARRIS, of Illinois, said the country had in the late election repudiated the report of the Kansas Committee and the action of the House, and attempted to keep up the fight for the sake of temporary political capital.

Mr. GREENE, of Ohio, while renewing his belief that the Kansas Legislature was a fraud, which he condemned as much as any man, asserted that the appropriation now pending was for the expenses of future members.

Mr. SENEAR defended the Committee from Mr. HARRIS' charge of its being packed. If so, he had no knowledge of it. There was not a single fact stated in the report but what bears the impress of truth. It has virtually received the sanction of the present Executive of Kansas, and had the effect of removing Governor SHANNON, the appointment of Governor GRAHAM, and the removal of President FRANKLIN from office. [Laughter.]

Mr. HARRIS, of Illinois, replied that the report has been laid on the shelf among the dust and cobwebs, and that all the capital that sought to be made would be lost.

Mr. STANTON replied that the present Legislature is not valid.

The appropriation was then stricken out, by 87 against 77.

Pending the consideration of the bill the House adjourned.

Mr. Buchanan's Movements.

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, Feb. 23.

Mr. BUCHANAN will arrive here to-morrow to meet Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, who is already here, and proceed the next day to Washington in company with Ex-Senator BIGLER.

Senator Sumner's Departure for Washington.

BOSTON, Monday, Feb. 23.

Hon. CHARLES SUMNER left here for Washington this afternoon. He will resume his seat in the Senate until the close of the session, and then proceed on his contemplated visit to Europe, having secured a passage in the steamer Fulton, which will leave New-York on the 7th of March.

The Legislatures of Nebraska, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

CHICAGO, Monday, Feb. 23.

The Governor of Nebraska has vetoed all the bills of the Legislature for chartering new banks.

The Minnesota Legislature has been occupied with plans for a State organization.

The Wisconsin Legislature has passed a bill giving S. M. BOOTH, the Editor of the Milwaukee Free Democrat, the power of replevin over his press which was seized by the United States Marshal. This is another step in the progress of the Garland Slave case.

The Government of Nova Scotia.

HALIFAX, Monday, Feb. 23.

The new Government was organized to-day, as follows: Mr. JOHNSTON, Attorney-General; Mr. WILKINS, Solicitor-General; Mr. MARSHALL, Financial Secretary; Mr. TUPPER, Provincial Secretary; Mr. STANLEY BROWN, Receiver-General; Mr. JAMES McNAB, Chairman Railway Commissioners; EDWARD KENNY, President Legislative Council; and Messrs. McKINNON, Charles Campbell, John Campbell, and Michael Tobin, Executive Councillors.

The Southern Mail.

BALTIMORE, Monday, Feb. 23.

New-Orleans papers of Tuesday of last week are to hand, but they contain no news of importance.

From Albany.

THE NEW-YORK CENTRAL RAILROAD—ABATEMENT OF THE FLOOD, ETC.

ALBANY, Monday, Feb. 23.

The Central Railroad is now in excellent working order throughout the entire length of the line. All the damage that was done by the recent flood has been repaired, and the trains are now running regularly on time.

The water here has fallen 18 inches since yesterday morning. The lower end of the ice barrier at Castleton Bar broke away to-day, carrying down all the ice at Coeymans which had not broken up before.

The bridges on the Hudson River road have been repaired, and the trains will be run to order immediately on the subsiding of the flood.

The military are out here in great numbers celebrating WASHINGTON's birth.

Fire at Frankfort, Me.

FRANKFORT, Monday, Feb. 23.

The Arey block, together with BENJ. HEW'S and JOB LORD's buildings, were destroyed by fire this morning. The occupants and their losses were OTIS KALEB & Co, $5,000; JOSEPH CLARK, $2,500; BENJ. HEW'S, $2,000, and JOB LORD $3,000 Partially insured. The Arey block was valued at $4,000.

Reported Death of Dr. E. K. Kane.

[PELEGRAPHIC.]

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, Feb. 23.

It is reported that a special dispatch has been received from New-Orleans announcing the death of Dr. KANE, and the arrival of his body there en route for Philadelphia.

It is a painful duty that we are called to perform in chronicling the decease of Dr. KANE, which we announce on the somewhat dubious authority of the above dispatch. It is but a few weeks since intelligence was received of his departure from England in search of health in Havana, and strong hopes were entertained that this change of climate and scene would serve the purpose of recruiting the physical energies which had become prostrate through a long course of unremitting toil and exposure. The hope proved fallacious, and Dr. KANE is gathered to his fathers, while yet at the threshold of his life, and at the commencement of a career whose early promise was already abundantly fulfilled. He died at Havana, at the age of 35 years. His mind remained clear, and his disease, though making rapid headway, left him moments for calm reflection, and gave him a peaceful end.

Dr. ELISHA KENT KANE was a native of Pennsylvania, born in Philadelphia, on the 3d of February, 1822. His early years were notable chiefly for the rapid development of that spirit of adventure and love of investigation which afterwards carried him over the world and led him into places which no man but he had ever trod. While yet a student, he joined one of the brothers ROGERS in a geological exploration of the Blue Mountains of Virginia, and when this task had been accomplished, devoted himself with renewed assiduity to the study of the Natural Sciences. In the interim, he pursued the necessary course of culture to qualify himself to enter college, and, having entered, studied diligently. In the year 1843, he graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, and immediately after that event undertook a course in the Medical Department of the same institution. During his prosecution of scientific investigations, the Doctor had made himself thoroughly familiar with chemistry, geology, mineralogy, astronomy, and surgery, and, besides, was a good classical scholar. He was one of that rare class who have the faculty of acquiring knowledge almost without effort, and when once acquired, of keeping it ready for use on all occasions. The natural consequence of the close application he was compelled to bestow upon his studies, however, undermined the physical system, which rebelled against the stagnation that it had undergone, so the young Doctor, now scarcely of age, came out from his closet far from robust. He made application for an appointment in the Navy, and having received it, demanded active service. His request was complied with, and he was appointed on the Diplomatic staff of the first American Embassy to China, as Assistant Surgeon. This position gave him abundant opportunities for the gratification of his passion for witnessing new scenes and visiting queer places. He went successively through the accessible portions of China, Ceylon and the Phillippines, and explored India quite thoroughly. In the island of Luzon,—the northernmost and largest of the Philippine group, he created a remarkable excitement by making a descent into the crater of Taal, suspended by a bamboo rope from a crag which projected two hundred feet above the interior scoria. The natives looked upon this as a daring feat, and declared that the Doctor was the first white man who had ever attempted it. The Doctor suffered by his exposure to the gases of the crater, but was plucky enough to remain below until he had made a sketch of the interior and collected specimens, all of which he brought up with him. His remaining adventures during this first foreign expedition were things to be remembered. He ascended the Himalayas, visited Egypt and went to the Upper Nile, where he made the acquaintance of Lepsius, who was at the time prosecuting his learned researches;—and returning his discoveries from the Nubians, returned home by way of Sennaar, which country he traversed on foot. He reached the United States, after a brief sojourn in Europe, in the year 1846.

The Mexican War now broke out, and Dr. KANE requested active service in the campaign; but the War Department preferred sending him to the coast of Africa, whither he promptly sailed. While engaged in service on that coast he made an effort to visit the slave marts of Whydah, but was intercepted by the coast force, and was sent home to Staff Headquarters. From the effects of that attempt he never wholly recovered. The war had not closed when he again set foot on American soil, and he had scarcely regained strength to walk, when he applied to President POLK for permission to enter the service. The request was complied with, and the Doctor was sent to Mexico, charged with dispatches of great importance to General SCOTT. He did not make his way unobstructed through the enemy's country; but was wounded and had his horse killed under him in a sharp skirmish. The kind nursing of a family in Puebla, who received him into their house, caused his restoration to health, so that he resumed active service, and remained in Mexico until the close of the campaign. Returning to his own country, he was detailed for service on the Coast Survey, and continued in that employment for a considerable time. His varied acquirements made him a most useful member of that important corps.

But it is upon Dr. KANE's remarkable explorations in the Arctic regions, while making his search for traces of Sir JOHN FRANKLIN's Expedition, that his fame chiefly rests. The earlier series of adventures in which the Doctor was engaged served only as a preparation and foundation for the greater that followed. In his modest narrative of the first expedition, the Doctor gives an account of the orders he received to join the Arctic Expedition. He says: "On the 18th of May, while bathing in the tepid waters of the Gulf of Mexico, I received one of those curious little splinters from Washington, which the electric telegraph has made so familiar to naval officers. It detached me from the Coast Survey, and ordered me to 'proceed forthwith to New-York for duty up on the Arctic Expedition.' Seven and a half days later (he adds) I had accomplished my overland journey of thirteen hundred miles, and in forty hours more was beyond the limits of the United States. The Department had calculated my traveling time to a nicety." The Expedition consisted of "two little hermaphrodite brigs," the Advance and the Rescue. They were under the command of Lieut. ROBERT E. DE HAVEN. Dr. KANE was appointed to the Advance, as Surgeon. The vessel was towed out of this port by "an asthmatic old steam-tug" on the 23d of May, 1850, and was followed by the Rescue. They pushed for the Arctic Sea direct, and on the 1st day of the following December entered Lancaster Sound, where the discovery of the graves of three of FRANKLIN's men was made, while the British Searching Expedition, under Com. PENNY, and the American, were lying together. After the expeditions separated, Lieut. DE HAVEN's party proceeded further to the northward, and were soon nipped by the ice, which imprisoned the Advance for nine months. While thus blocked in, the vessel drifted with the fields of ice for a distance of 1,800 miles. The opening of the mild season enabled the party to extricate themselves, and the expedition returned to this port on Tuesday, Sept. 30, 1851, having been absent one year and four months. Both vessels suffered but little from their encounter with the ice, and the crew maintained excellent health and discipline. Dr. KANE prosecuted diligently his scientific researches during the time the expedition remained in the Arctic Sea, and on his return embodied in a "Personal Narrative" the results of the cruise; Lieut. DE HAVEN, his superior officer, having declined to make any other than an official report. This narrative was published by the HARPERS in 1853.

The results of this first expedition encouraged hopes that definite tidings would ultimately be received from FRANKLIN's Expedition. Early in the year 1853, a letter was addressed by Lady FRANKLIN to the President of the United States, in which the highest commendation was bestowed upon the American Expedition, and the aid of our Government again solicited. The appeal was not permitted to pass unheeded. The Government detailed Naval officers for the duty of a second exploration, and the Advance was now placed at the disposal of Dr. KANE himself. In December, 1853, he received orders to conduct the new Expedition, and sailed from this port on the 31st of May, 1853. Through the munificent liberality of Mr. HENRY GRINNELL, aided largely by Mr. GEORGE PEABODY, the brig received a perfect outfit. Her equipment was deficient in nothing that could qualify her to undergo the dangers of the cruise, and the behavior of the craft in the trying situations in which she was afterwards placed, showed the excellence of the preparations. The Expedition sailed out of the port, followed by the good wishes of all; but after the first tidings were received that it was spoken at sea, there was no intelligence of its movements. Dr. KANE, as it afterwards appeared, had pushed northward with great rapidity, and before he could extricate himself was frozen up and compelled to Winter in the ice-peaks. On the 24th of May, 1855, finding that it was impossible to clear the brig, the party came to the determination to forsake her; and did so, first taking out the necessary provisions, documents, instruments, &c., and placing them on sledges and in boats, which were dragged by the men over the ice, with incredible difficulty, for a distance of three hundred miles. Then, having reached the sea, the party took to the open boats and made the best of their way, for a distance of 1,200 miles, to the Danish settlement of Upernavik, in Greenland, where they were hospitably received.

Meanwhile Dr. KANE had been given up for lost. Representations were made to Congress, urging the duty of instituting a search for the missing, the result of which was an appropriation of $150,000 and the detail of the Arctic and Release, under the command of Lieut. HARTSTENE, for the prosecution of a search. This expedition sailed from New-York in April, 1855, and on the 13th of the following September fell in with Dr. KANE's party at Disko Island, 250 miles south of Upernavik. They had taken refuge on board a Danish trading vessel, for the arrival of which they had waited at the port for several weeks. With a touching simplicity, Dr. KANE describes this meeting in the last volume of his Second Narrative—just published: "Presently we were alongside. An officer, whom I shall ever remember as a cherished friend, Capt. HARTSTENE, hailed a little man in a ragged flannel shirt; 'Is that Dr. KANE?'—and with the 'Yes' that followed, the rigging was manned by our countrymen, and cheers welcomed us back to the social world of love which they represented." This is the same Capt. HARTSTENE whose commission to restore the Resolute has brought him lately into notice in a new field.

The return of Dr. KANE to New-York was the occasion of a wonderful excitement. On the evening of Thursday, Oct. 11, 1855, it was announced that the Searching Expedition had returned with Dr. KANE and his party. An eager throng assembled to greet them, and the familiar face of the Doctor, bronzed by exposure and adorned with a heavy beard, was looked upon like that of an old friend. The Doctor made his report of the results of his cruise; the principal part of importance announced among his discoveries being that which established the existence of an open Polar Sea. Dr. KANE immediately commenced the preparation of his narrative—published a few weeks since under the title of Arctic Explorations. In November last, having completed this task, he sailed for Europe, and on arriving in England was at once received with a cordial British welcome. He, however, declined all public honors, and appeared but little in public. His health continuing to decline, he determined to try the effect of a change of climate, and in a very short time sailed for Havana, where he ended his days, far too early.

In character Dr. KANE was peculiarly retiring and unostentatious; not distrustful of his abilities, but slow to obtrude them into notice; ambitious, yet

Reports of an Anti-Papal Conspiracy—Attempt of the Mother Church

[illegible] United States, to exa[illegible] [illegible] Court for a [illegible] [illegible] Tuesday, [illegible] Saturday [illegible] Sir, if you please." By this [illegible] arrived in the little back room and found [illegible] on two stools at a rough [illegible] which was opened. A register. I con[illegible] the manner in which this [illegible] names who wish to see me [illegible] the bench out of me. There was [illegible] in the position I occupied just at that moment which I did not comprehend. However I signed my name on the register just below that of Lord C—, another "distinguished foreigner," as the nine man styled his patrons, who is stopping only two floors below me. It was something to find that I had company in the singular business.

I had [illegible] in advance, for in France the people are extremely [illegible] in these small transactions, and true to [illegible] the man awakened me in ample time [illegible] of the execution. I left home at half past [illegible] o'clock in the morning, and first awakening [illegible] we walked leisurely to the place of execution, [illegible] we arrived a little before six. It was a [illegible] and cold morning; all the stars of the firmament were visible, and sparkled brightly through the [illegible] atmosphere. The Boulevards were almost deserted; here and there a party of early [illegible], or noisy masters returning from the masked ball of the Jardin d'Hiver, alone disturbed the city [illegible].

After [illegible] passed the Bastille, however, and plunged into the densely populated Faubourg St. Antoine, we saw groups of people flocking towards the place of execution. The whole Faubourg, indeed, was alive and on foot. The soldiers detailed for the occasion had preceded us, and as the people had been [illegible] for this execution, the noise of [illegible] and the tramp of the morning sufficed to give the place a [illegible].

The guillotine was erected on the Place de la Roquette [illegible] the prison of La Roquette and Les Grandes Prisons. It is within a block of the grand thoroughfare to the Cemetery of Père La Chaise.

On the morning, we found there three hundred persons [illegible] on the ground. The soldiers had only just completed [illegible] the place, and we were permitted to approach the guillotine. But soon the after line was thrown [illegible], and the crowd was pushed back and back; until a hollow square was formed around the fatal [illegible], at a distance of a hundred and fifty feet [illegible] the sides, and in front and rear from prison to prison.

We were well placed at the side at the nearest point to the guillotine, and next to the soldiers. But extraordinary precautions had been taken to guard against the crowd, and not less than a thousand soldiers, including three squadrons of cavalry, were on the ground. Nearest the scaffold were two lines of cavalry, then a double file of infantry, then a hollow square kept by a strong detachment of policemen, who had to control the crowd.

For two hours we stood awaiting the fatal moment in a crowd of workmen, every one of whom, as far as we could see, wore a cap and a blouse. The women, who were numerous, were all in caps, except a few respectable-looking [illegible], and most of the execution, and learned to the spot in their silk robes and demi-[illegible]. They had the best seats, however, to take off their masks. The crowd was seriously estimated a [illegible] of whom were the criminal. The people around were poor, and seemed to be all [illegible] kind of [illegible] [illegible] in fact of [illegible] place in Paris for years. [illegible] each other and with the officers, and the guillotine came in for its share of best sets.

During the [illegible] half hour we stood [illegible] in [illegible] the people [illegible] his [illegible] perfectly [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

NEW-YORK CITY.

[illegible] Gen. W. Sayard [illegible] at the First District Police Office, for a salutice assault upon [illegible] of a house where at No. 3 Bowery, it appears, went into Albert's liquor store [illegible] time was ordered out. As he neither heard nor heeded the order, Albert attempted to put him out, whereupon Seward drew his pocket-knife, and with it stabbed him in the left temple, inflicting a severe wound.

When Seward was brought before the Magistrate, the usual printed examination-paper was handed him, which he read, and wrote down his replies thereto in a very neat hand. He pleaded guilty to the charge, said he was twenty-three years of age; was born in Kentucky; lives in Cincinnati, and is a painter by trade.

He was committed for trial in default of $1,000 bail.

LOCKED UP FOR ROBBING.

A man named Edward Jones was committed to the Tombs yesterday for trial, by Justice Osborne, on a charge of forgery, preferred against him by Mr. David Belden, of No. 18 Bond-street. The charge has been pending since Saturday last, on which day Jones was arrested in Wall-street, by Officer Richard Simpson, of the Chief's office. The forged note was for $150, and purported to be signed by the complainant. It was dated Feb. 7, 1857, and payable at the Nassau Bank in sixty days. The note, it appears, was sold by Jones to George Copway, the "Indian Chief."

FRAUDS BY AN INTELLIGENCE OFFICE KEEPER.

Charles G. Harris, John G. Gallagher and two others, appeared yesterday before Justices BRENNAN, at the Essex Market Police Court, and complained that they had each been defrauded out of $1 by the keeper of an Intelligence office at No. 76½ Allen-street, under pretence of providing them situations. After paying their dollars, they say they each received a receipt signed, "T. H. Hairs, Superintendent," and were promised that situations would be ready for them at 8 o'clock on Monday morning. They called at the hour specified, but found the office closed. They then went to the Mayor's office, where they were informed by the Inspector of Intelligence offices that the license of this office in Allen-street had been revoked on Friday last.

A warrant for the arrest of the man Hairs was granted by Justice BRENNAN.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.

James Burns and Edmund Hackett were held to answer on Sunday by Justice OSBORNE, on a charge of knocking down and robbing William Henry of Oliver-street, while he was proceeding to his home about 1 o'clock, Sunday morning. Henry alleges that the prisoner was assisted in the robbery by five other men who managed to escape.

ANOTHER HIGHWAY ROBBERY.

A young man named Jacob G. Becchar was committed by the same magistrate on a charge of having, with two others, attacked and robbed Jas. W. Clark of the Sands-street Hotel, Brooklyn, out of $56 in gold.

FAINTING.

A genteel and pretty-looking young woman was brought to the Tombs on Saturday morning last, supposed to be insane. She had been found by the Police in an omnibus, unable to tell her name or residence. She wore a plaid silk dress, straw hat and black veil, very neat gaiter boots, good and clean under clothing, plain rings on her fingers, and small earrings in her ears. She appeared to be about 26 years of age, and evidently had recently become a mother. Her name, as nearly as could be gleaned from her imperfect pronunciation of it, in a moment of reaction, was "Lizzy Riley." Fatal symptoms have supervened since her admission to the City Prison, where she yet remains in charge of Dr. Covel.

The Mysterious Murder of Carlisle, in Broadway.

From the Sunday Post, of Feb. 21.

It seems to be a popular superstition that the perpetrator of a murder must necessarily have some clue to his detection. Yet it is by no means so uncommon a thing as is generally supposed for this crime to escape detection by the officers of justice. The Burdell case looks much as if it might be one of this kind. Many of our readers may remember a murder committed at the corner of Broadway and Leonard-street, some years since, on a man named CARLISLE, if we recall the name rightly. All that was known at the time was that the victim was called out of the Carlisle House bar-room into Broadway, and soon after was found dead on the pavement, having been shot. The Coroner called his jury together, and a protracted inquest was held, but no clue to the author of the murder was found. The jury were obliged to bring in a verdict of murder by hands unknown; nor to this day have the authorities been able to fix the responsibility for CARLISLE'S murder upon any one.

We now propose to state some circumstances, derived from what we deem entirely authentic sources, in connection with that mysterious assassination, which go to show that, contrary to the general impression, in the multitude of parties to a murder there is safety; and also, that murder is sometimes perpetrated in the most exposed and public places without detection.

The murdered man, as we have been given to understand, formed an attachment for the beautiful wife of a wealthy citizen of New-York—a man whose generosity of nature and strong personal qualities had drawn around him a devoted set of friends—most of them, like himself, somewhat in the sporting line. The lady, false as fair, returned the guilty love guiltily, and was locked up by the husband, whose devotion to her was such that he could not give her up, even after what had passed. He made overtures to the determined Lothario—first by threats, which were unheeded; then by bribes, which were partially successful, so that, on receiving a sum of money, the seducer promised to leave the City for the term of the lady's natural life. A few months saw the money spent and the man returned, and pacing up and down the pavement opposite the lady's place of detention, (as she only went out well attended,) making signals, &c., to her, and she, consistent in her infidelity, replying to them with determined purpose to effect her escape in some way. The husband, still unwilling to abandon her to herself, renewed his overtures to the intrusive gentleman, and made an agreement to pay down another certain sum to secure his perpetual absence. The latter agreed a second time to come to an arrangement, but before the money had been paid backed out of the agreement, and utterly refused to make any promises in the matter. He continued his demonstrations toward the lady, and the consequence was that he was called out from the bar-room of the Carlton House on the fatal afternoon—it was, we believe, about dusk—and found some half dozen men on the pavement at the corner. Which of those six it was that did the deed, they know, but CARLISLE was shot as he stood among them; the six men got into six cabs which were in waiting, backed up to the curb and were driven in six different ways, each driver being an accomplice; and so the guilty flirtation ended.

Setting Bull-Dogs on Sailors.

AN examination was commenced yesterday before Commissioner WEITZ, in the case of the charge against the Captain and first mate of the Ellen Austin, for severely assaulting one of the crew of the vessel and setting bull-dogs upon him. The party bringing the complaint is Thomas Campbell, one of the crew of the Three Bells, who rendered such valuable service to the shipwrecked passengers of the San Francisco, and were rewarded by Government with gold medals.

Before Hon. Justice Pethebridge.

DECISIONS.

Norsworth vs. Black.—The prayer of the petitioner must be denied for the present, with liberty to renew it as he may be advised. Second case—Referred to P. T. Ruggles, Esq.

The Park Bank vs. Davis.—Ordered that the plaintiffs give additional security.

Moore vs. Tonner.—Allowed.

Christie vs. Mistard.—Motion to dissolve injunction must be denied.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Woodruff.

LEASE OF THE EMPIRE CITY BANK.

Moffat vs. The Sixpenny Savings Bank.—This is an action brought to recover $600 for one quarter's rent of the premises formerly occupied by the Empire City Bank. The case has been before tried, and was reported in the TIMES of July 2, 1856. The plaintiff leased the building to the Empire City Bank, which became insolvent, and yielded the premises to the defendants. They refuse to pay the plaintiff rent therefor, claiming that they hold under a lease from the Empire City Bank, by which it was expressly agreed that they should pay no rent to the plaintiff for the use thereof. On the second trial, yesterday, the defendants offered a receipt for one quarter's rent, to prove that they were not assignees of the lease, but that they hired from the Empire City Bank. In consequence of this, His Honor dismissed the complaint.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge Brady.

A JUSTICE OF THE MARINE COURT HAS NO POWER TO GRANT A NEW TRIAL, EXCEPT IN CASES OF REPLEVIN.

Conrad Zeelin vs. Henry Drake et al.—BRADY, J.—The Marine Court, before one of its Justices on motion and upon an alleged irregularity, set aside a judgment which was not obtained by default. The defendants for that reason now ask to have the judgment of this Court required by filing a transcript vacated of record. The application is resisted on the ground that the Marine Court has no power on motion to vacate its judgments unless obtained by default as provided by the act of 1853, in relation to that Court. The Supreme Court, in the case of The People, ex. The Marine Court of the City of New-York, 19 Wend., 279, decided that the Marine Court had no power to set aside a judgment, and grant a new trial. Chief-Justice WELLES, observing that the power so to do, taken from the Court, was an obvious and [illegible] by the Legislature, in the statute, has also The People ex rel. Beckstein, Sheriff, &c., vs. Sedgwick, 1 Sup. Ct. See also Al[illegible] vs. Mathews, 4 Ed. Smith's Rep. 38, and Camp vs. Stewart, 1 Hill, 64. The decision in the case of Lowery was made in 1854 and although the jurisdiction of the Marine Court has since been enlarged by several statutes, none of them confers the power under consideration. The act of 1853 authorizes any one of the Justices to open default on such terms as may be just and proper in all actions tried before him, and the General Term to review all judgments on appeal, without regard to the mode of trial, except when taken by default, in which case application must be made to the Justice who tries the cause. The People ex rel. Debenette vs. Gale, 13 Pr. R. 361. The defendant's remedy was to appeal to the General Term of the Marine Court, in the manner prescribed by that act.

For these reasons the motion must be denied, but with liberty to the defendants to renew the motion, if so advised, on further facts.

Mary G. E. Bunker vs. Louis Bunker.—Divorce granted.

A Word about General Mosquera.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, Feb. 21, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In your issue of the 20th inst., an article has been published in regard to a suit then pending in the District Court of the United States, against the members of the house of Mosquera & Co.; the commentaries in the case are erroneous, and the information must have been furnished by interested parties, to do the greatest possible injury to the well-merited and hard-earned reputations of Gen. Mosquera and his son, Anibal de Mosquera.

It is utterly untrue that any person by the name of Antonio Lopez has made any consignment to Mosquera & Co. The complaint to that effect made by Ed. Poirier is destitute of foundation, and the case has been decided by the Court to-day, and the order of arrest against A. de Mosquera vacated. Mr. Poirier evidently intended to make a strong case, out of the matter of a debt of some $30,000 due Mr. Manuel Lopez; Mosquera & Co. never having acted as factors or trustees of said Lopez. Mr. Poirier, who, assisted by other parties, made the complaint in question, will certainly be called to account for his singular manner of conducting so delicate a business.

There is, however, an intimation in your article of the 20th, couched in such terms that it is impossible for any one well acquainted with the character of General Mosquera to restrain his indignation. It reads thus: "The reporters were informed of the fact, but requested to make no mention of the arrest till the father, the General was arrested also. Our neighbor's exclusive statement, erroneous as it was, had the effect to keep the General out of the way, and it is probable he will continue retired for an indefinite period to come."

This statement is not true in any particular. Gen. Mosquera left New-York in the early part of January, while the order of arrest was served on his son (on the 12th of February,) to attend to his duties as Senator in the Congress of New-Granada, which convened on the first of February. He is not a man to shrink from any responsibility, whatever it may be; and the most remarkable traits in his character are, his proverbial frankness and unshrinking firmness in all trying circumstances. It is fortunate for the parties already mentioned that he is absent from New-York.

Apart from the pecuniary responsibility which Gen. Mosquera has incurred by the losses of his commercial house, there is no moral responsibility on his part in the matter of its transactions, as he has been absent on public business in New-Granada for more than twenty-four months during the last three years, while the transactions, matter of this complaint, were in progress. Mr. A. de Mosquera, who managed the business in question, has come forward, and destroyed the malicious allegations against his house.

If it were intended to refute false charges and imputations by setting forth facts against certain of the parties forming a clique in New-York, and who have instigated the proceedings against the Mosqueras, those parties would deeply regret their conduct; but the unassigned, having no other object in view than the vindication of his friends, forbears from such exposures as the information in his possession would enable him to set forth; having enjoyed the friendship of the Messrs. Mosquera, and partaken of their confidence, he would be recreant to his own sense of honor did he fail to bear testimony to their unvarying integrity and personal worth, and with no other object in view than the performance of a duty, he submits the foregoing to the attention of your many readers, and remains,

Yours, most respectfully,

FRANCISCO PARRAGA,

Secretary of the Legation of New Granada.

The information concerned the Messrs. Mosquera, which our correspondent complains of, was obtained from the United States Marshal's Office. It certainly was not malicious on their part, but arose from the fact that the United States officers were unable to discover the whereabouts of the General, and presumed that the statements furnished them were correct.

LONG ISLAND.

Shocking Results of Rum-Drinking.

The wife of Mr. CUNNINGHAM, who keeps a dram shop in Graham-street, near Myrtle-avenue, on Saturday night, about 10½ o'clock, threw herself headlong out of the window of the second story of the house, while in a drunken frenzy. She struck head-foremost upon the bricks of the rear area, causing a frightful scalp wound, and breaking both her wrists. Dr. HUTCHINS was sent for to dress her wounds, and pronounced her injuries very serious, the skull also being fractured. Mrs. CUNNINGHAM has been addicted to hard drinking, and had been sent to the Poor-house to give her a chance to reform, but owing to the connivance or neglect of the keeper, she was allowed to escape after a very short sojourn in that institution, when she returned to her home and resumed her career of dissipation. On the night in question she had imbibed a large quantity of bad rum, which rendered her frantic and unmanageable; she broke up the furniture and smashed things generally, when a policeman was sent for to arrest her. While he was preparing to enter the house the woman dashed headforemost through the window. This unhappy woman is the mother of nine children, most of them living in the house.

Dedication of a Fine Methodist Church.

The new Summerfield Methodist Church, erected at the corner of Washington and Greene avenues, was dedicated with appropriate exercises yesterday. The building is a model of a Methodist Church, for a part of the city which, in spite of itself, is bound to be fashionable. It is light enough; is chastily ornamented; the seats are comfortable; there is no echo heard within its walls, and, altogether, we doubt if there is a handsomer interior in the city. The cost of the edifice alone was $20,500. The cost of the Lecture-room, (repairing,) and Sexton's house, adjoining, was $1,500. The cost of the eight lots occupied was $9,000. The whole cost to the congregation is $31,500.

To pay for this they have received subscriptions to the amount of $10,000.

They have raised, on bond and mortgage $10,000 more on the Church, and $5,000 on the Lecture Room. After Bishop JAYNE'S sermon yesterday morning—it was an eloquent one—it was announced that they hoped to raise $7,000 from the congregation present. They went at it heartily, and $2,000 were raised before the close of the morning service; the balance, we presume, was made out in the afternoon and evening.

A Contumacious Jury.

Justice FENN, in the Eastern District of Brooklyn on Friday last, summoned a jury to hear a case before him, which was duly submitted to them. The Jury could not agree upon a verdict, and so agreed to disagree, and as the Justice could not so found they discharged themselves. For this Justice FENN had the Jurors arrested and fined each $10, or in default to be imprisoned five days. The Jurors are very indignant, refuse to pay the fine imposed, and intend to act on the offensive by testing the right of Justice FENN to hold the office he is now in. The quarrel is peculiarly local, and a pretty one as it stands.

MARKET REPORTS.

Markets...Carefully reported for N. Y. Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, Monday, Feb. 23—6 P. M.

ASHES—Are in light supply and moderate request. Pearls, $7 62½; Pots, $7 62½@$7 75 ⅌ 100 lbs. The latter are the rarest.

BOOTS AND SHOES—The Boston Shipping List of the 21st, says: "No change in the Boot and Shoe trade to notice the past week. A very good business has been done, but the trade is not so active as was anticipated. River and harbor navigation is now, however, uninterrupted, and a more active trade is generally looked for. In prices there is no change, although in some instances holders have yielded a shade to effect sales. The supply of goods is not large although quite equal to the present demand, but it is confidently believed that the market will be cleared before the spring trade closes."

The quantity cleared at the Boston Custom House has been as follows:

NEWS OF THE DAY.

A [illegible] mercantile firm in this City have received advices from their correspondent in Nicaragua, purporting to be of later date than any [illegible] conveying the information that since the arrival of the Expeditionary Army, Walker's forces had [illegible] in killed and wounded [illegible] the attempt to ascend the river with his [illegible] Government) [illegible] the soldiers from the [illegible] upon logs, rafts, &c. This [illegible] have been received by the Texas [illegible] which [illegible] the Passengers, and may possibly [illegible] more news. We are not in [illegible] possible the Times [illegible] such news without its [illegible] on her arrival. Besides [illegible] of Colonel Lockridge, at the [illegible] so as make it probable [illegible] to speedily contain rumors so disastrous [illegible] A letter directly from [illegible] Nicaragua, from a Correspondent of the [illegible] publish in another column, contains [illegible] of considerable interest. We [illegible] to consider this reported intelligence [illegible] authentic.

[illegible] Senate, yesterday, the [illegible] from Michigan, Virginia [illegible] were presented. The bill [illegible] with a view to perfecting [illegible] was passed. The [illegible] were considered, but disposed of [illegible] by the arrival of the hour [illegible] Executive Session. In the House, [illegible] Appropriation bill was passed, including [illegible] for books for new [illegible] company of Scouts [illegible] for service in the war of 1812. The Legislative, Executive and [illegible] bill was considered. And [illegible] for compensation to the mem[illegible] was carried, yea [illegible] against 60.

[illegible] Bill, or the act which passed [illegible] giving for substantial [illegible] the Union, [illegible] to be restored [illegible] of the Chairman of the [illegible] ways and means and this course [illegible] the copy which we have already published. The Advertiser must have received a bill which [illegible] purposes, but not adopted; the act passed merely establishes a free list.

The treaty lately negotiated with the Mexican Government by our Minister, Mr. Forsyth, is expected to arrive in Washington to-morrow. There are various reports regarding its provisions, one of which is that it stipulates for the cession of Mexican territory down to the twenty-ninth parallel of latitude, and for the adjustment of claims of citizens of the United States upon the Mexican Government, and possibly for the removal of some restrictions which now obstruct our commerce with Mexico. A rumor also prevails in Washington, that the Mexican Government is about to apply to the United States for protection, in view of menacing dangers abroad and home distractions. This, however, we consider highly improbable, as the condition of domestic affairs is daily becoming more settled under the Administration of Comonfort, and the prospect of a war with Spain is growing less distinct.

The Cuban bill seems after all to have been hopelessly misconstrued. One of the Senate's amendments to which the House concurred, authorized the receipt of these coins at the mint for bullion, at their nominal value, to be paid in the same coin. This is an important amendment, and shows that the House to get rid of these pieces at a premium, has been wholly unwilling.

The Secretary of State has notified the Governor of Texas that the Indian Bill has not passed Congress, and that no appropriation for the purchase of Indian lands in Texas has been made. The Texan Legislature, however, will, of course, not fail to appreciate this [illegible].

General Cass.

We are to have Gen. Cass for Secretary of State. The selection is decidedly significant. The venerable Senator's position on the Slavery and for many years the most conspicuous member of his party, very naturally directed attention to him in connection with a Cabinet office. But there are marked peculiarities in his political relations which cannot have been overlooked, or held subordinate to his general prominence as a party leader. His leadership for several years past has been of rather a doubtful character. In 1848, while running as the regular Democratic candidate for President, he was defeated by his own party in the Northern States, because he was opposed to the Wilmot Proviso. Since that time he has been equally obnoxious to the South because he adopted the doctrine of popular sovereignty in the Territories. He is the father of the squatter sovereignty theory, and, unlike many who profess to accept it, he believes it. He holds that the Territorial Government, representing the people, has the right to prohibit Slavery, and the great mass of the people of the Northern States, without regard to party distinctions, agree with him. The ultra Pro-Slavery men at the South scout this doctrine, and both in and out of Congress, have ridiculed it without mercy.

When the Nebraska bill passed the Senate, Gen. Cass exclaimed, exultingly, "Hurrah for Squatter Sovereignty." He had a right to exult, for, without meaning or knowing it, the Democratic majority in the Senate had indorsed his views. He may now fairly claim that his own appointment as Secretary of State inaugurates Squatter Sovereignty as the doctrine of the new Executive.

The foreign significance of this appointment is just exciting, and the country will regard it with more distrust. The General has always been distinguished by a dislike, not to say hatred, of Great Britain;—and, unfortunately, just now our relations with Great Britain are rather critical. The General hotly opposed the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty, and the Dallas-Clarendon Treaty now pending is designed to strengthen instrument vital and vigorous effect. Mr. Buchanan is more than suspected of an equal disrelish for its provisions;—and his selection of Gen. Cass for his first Secretary looks no good to its confirmation. And it is universally and deeply felt that the rejection of this treaty under existing circumstances will of itself almost amount to a rupture with England, and will leave the two countries in a position which may well occasion alarm for the future. It cannot be rejected except upon the absolute denial to Great Britain of any voice or influence in the settlement of Central American affairs;—and it is fully as incredible to believe that she will ever assent to such an exclusion. England has rights and interests there, which she will preserve and defend at any hazard, and to the last extremity, and our Government will make a fatal mistake if it proceeds upon any other supposition.

The fears of the country are therefore not a little excited by the accession to the leadership in the Cabinet, of one whose whole career has been marked by an unfortunately bitter hostility to a first-rate Power, and who is believed to be opposed to the confirmation of a treaty so important to the peace of the country as the one now pending. And yet these fears may be unreasonable and premature. Gen. Cass has reached an age at which rashness usually gives place to caution, and the responsibility as well as the power of office is certain to be deeply felt. The conservative influence of high station is itself among the safeguards of peace, and it is not uncommon for the most violent and radical in opposition, to become the most cautious and conservative when actually charged with the responsibilities of public affairs. Neither Mr. Buchanan nor Gen. Cass have any personal ambition to gratify, or any personal ends to serve, by plunging the country into troubles abroad or at home. And it is among the favorable omens of the day that Gen. Cass has already felt it due to his position and his character to disabuse the public mind of the notion, that he is to carry into office the prejudices and hostilities that have characterized so large a part of his long Senatorial career.

Gen. Walker's Position.

The present position of Gen. Walker is by no means encouraging. Even the most ardent of his friends have serious apprehensions for his safety and the success of his cause. A glance at the successive changes in his condition, since he became President of Nicaragua, will show that these misgivings are not without foundation.

At the outset, when President Rivas first disputed his right to the Executive chair, it was believed that a majority of the natives of the country regarded him as a friend, and it is certain that many of them fought on his side, and that, too, quite as bravely as any of their race. He was then regarded as the hope of the Liberals, and all who opposed him were esteemed Serviles. But whether by his own acts or by the natural course of events, he soon lost that position and was universally regarded as an invader. He abandoned all claim of the popular will as the basis of his authority, which he held avowedly and exclusively by the sword. It was then that the other Central-American States became alarmed, and combined for their own safety in defence of what they called the rights of the people of Nicaragua. They denied Walker represented the wishes of any recognizable portion of the native residents; and he appeared to be of like opinion, for from that period he sought the means of sustaining his power in a foreign land. The terms Serviles and Liberals were no longer used to designate the contending parties in Nicaragua.

The struggle was now between the Central Americans and the Filibusteros; Gen. Walker commenced the fight with Serapiqui, Castillo and San Carlos, on the line of the San Juan del Norte, and nearly all the strongholds on the Pacific side by his own hands. Enthusiasts from San Francisco, New-Orleans, New-York and other large cities of the United States flocked to his standard and fought well. For a time victory followed victory in rapid succession, and his ultimate triumph was not doubted. Proclamation followed proclamation and decree followed decree. There was the seizure of the [illegible] of Mons. Marcy and [illegible] of Domingo Salinas. And [illegible] a letter of [illegible] and [illegible] of Walker and his [illegible] were sent from New-York.

Meanwhile the allied army was improving rapidly in the art of war. Walker was secure in Granada. There is no Granada now. Seek for more than a thousand graves together, and when found you will be upon the boundary of the ruins. He lost back his enemies from Masaya easily. They shut their eyes and turned their backs when they discharged their arms, and they fired too high. But they came back to Masaya again, and again he repulsed them. This time, however, his men remarked an unpleasant difference in the firing of the natives. They used Minie rifles, and aimed with uncomfortable accuracy. Nevertheless he drove them back. But he does not hold Masaya yet. He fought and won at Virgin Bay. Gen. Canas was there the other day, with four hundred men, and there were none to oppose him. He held San George and Obraje. They have been better fortified since, but not by Gen. Walker. He sent his men to take them on the 26th and 28th of January last, but they returned without them, leaving some thirty of their number dead witnesses of the strength of adobe walls.

We have mentioned a decree of President Walker, concerning the Transit, and also the seizure of the Transit boats. Since then the Costa Ricans have issued a decree, and they, too, have seized the boats, and fortified and occupied the line of the San Juan to Lake Nicaragua. He once spoke of his men by thousands; he now counts by hundreds and by fifties. And during all this time the Allies, with experience, and French, German and English officers to teach them, have been improving in the art of war.

From this review, it will be observed that, from having entire control of Nicaragua, and a numerically respectable army to sustain him, his power has gradually but steadily declined, until now he holds only Rivas, with an army that has twice proved insufficient to retard the progress of his enemies in their work of hemming him in. What, then, is his prospect of extricating himself from the meshes the allied army is throwing around him? He has but one that we can discover, and there is at present no satisfactory reason to suppose that even this will be realized. If the rescue party were twice its present strength it could not reach Gen. Walker in time to serve him, by way of the San Juan del Norte. Grant that Col. Lockridge will take Serapiqui, although there is, as yet, no assurance of even that. They lost ten men and had a number wounded in simply getting ready to attack it. He cannot, under the present circumstances, avoid losing many more, before he succeeds. The fort is a very good one, and it is occupied by men who proved, while he was taking Cody's Point, that they were expert gunners. The shots fired on and into the little steamboat from which Gen. Wheat caused them considerably astonished, were equal in accuracy of direction, to the firing of French or English sharpshooters. All told they were but 400 strong.

But if Lockridge succeeds here, he must then attack Castillo, a still stronger fortification, and he must do it with a smaller force than at Serapiqui. Suppose that is killed and wounded they are shorn of one-quarter of their strength—one hundred men. Their chances at Castillo are not so good as at Serapiqui, for it is known to be well manned, and from its position, much more difficult to reach.

Grant again, that they will take Castillo. They must lose more men; and then, far above them, at the entrance to Lake Nicaragua, is Fort San Carlos—the Gibraltar of all the line of fortifications. But grant that he will take San Carlos also, with the number of men whom he can bring to attack it. From its known strength and the skill of those who man the guns, it is easy to see of how little service the remnant of his troops would prove to Gen. Walker, even allowing that they receive an average reinforcement from New-Orleans, while on their way. In this calculation we have granted, also, that as they proceed they will secure the regular river boats, with which to pass Machuca Rapids, Balas Rapids, Mico Rapids, Castillo and Toro Rapids. But before they made an attempt upon Serapiqui, they found that the steamer Wheeler had been sunk. And we have the authority of Costa Rican officers for the statement that for several weeks all the other boats, the lake boats included, have had quantities of powder on board, so arranged that in case of any unexpected disaster they can be blown up, and the progress of the reserve party thus arrested. If they should arrive at the mouth of the lake and find themselves without boats that could live on that water, they might as well have staid at their first quarters at Punta Arenas. It may be thought that the schooner General Walker, hauled up for repairs at Virgin Bay, could be sent down. But it must be borne in mind that since it was known to be there, Gen. Canas has been at Virgin Bay with four hundred men.

The only chance, then, for effective relief to Gen. Walker is by way of the San Juan del Sur. If a large force were sent that way before the Costa Ricans close the road to Rivas, he might be relieved for a time. But the prospect is not good. He expected five hundred recruits by the Oriole on her last trip, and he received but forty-four. In spite of the vigor and courage he has displayed, it is impossible, therefore, to conceal the fact that his present position is exceedingly precarious, and that there is little prospect of its improvement. A letter from our special correspondent reports the health and spirits of his troops as far from satisfactory; and the chances now seem to be that his race is nearly run.

The Corruption Report—Debate in Congress.—The Boston Daily Advertiser, in an article commenting upon the report of the Investigating Committee, says:

"We beg to assure members that the country will expect a very different debate on Wednesday from that of last Thursday; and any member who is conspicuous in making to stifle the matter in its preliminary stages can scarcely fail to be suspected of participation in the corruption which is generally believed to exist at Washington, and of which some tangible evidence has at last appeared."

This is eminently just and true. Whatever may Congress may endeavor to take of this subject, if they people at large cannot be brought to regard this matter as one of little [illegible] importance, and reply to the question, the [illegible] as trifling a thing. The number of Massachusetts men [illegible] men. It was one of the most impudent acts that ever was committed, and the most impudent thing about it is that any one could have committed it so boldly, and yet have left no clue to his detection. There is but one prudent course to be pursued in reference to this strange affair, and that is to believe in nothing which has not sufficient evidence to sustain it. For the present the tragedy is involved in an impenetrable mist, and all speculations, theories and hypotheses are only calculated to baffle the judgment, mislead investigation, and render the detection of the guilty parties more difficult. The old adage that murder will out would very soon fall into disrepute, if it should fall to the lot of Coroner Connery to preside over a few more juries.

Reforms of our City Government.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Much complaint is made against our City Government, and unfortunately with too much cause. We labor under not only the great taxation, but a want of efficiency in the administration of affairs.

But bad as this is, let us consider whether, for a time at least, we are not in a fair way to have matters worse. Suppose the Legislature passes the set of Commissioners they have had introduced to Albany, viz: A new City Charter, a commission to build a new City Hall, a commission to improve the Central Park, and a commission to manage the Police, &c., &c., &c. For each of these purposes a bill has been introduced and in each will be reported next Wednesday just as sent from this City. It will be remembered that the Commissioners are to be appointed by the Governor.

Now the Attorney-General, in answer to a resolution of inquiry offered by Senator Brown, has given an official opinion that neither the Governor nor the Legislature has power under the State Constitution to appoint Commissioners or any other local City or County officers.

Well, suppose the Legislature, disregarding this opinion, as no doubt it will, pass these measures, and the Commissioners be appointed, the question will then arise, will the local authorities permit them to act?—will the Mayor and Goldsmith Comptroller of New-York admit or recognize the authority of the Legislature to appoint such officers, and will not the present Police Commissioners and Central Park Commissioners, &c., refuse to yield to the new claimants? We think they will so refuse! The Courts will then be resorted to, a general derangement and probably stoppage of public business will ensue, and years intervene before the matter is settled. In the meantime what becomes of the efficiency of a police in such a condition—viz., hung up in the Courts and without payment of salaries? It will fast sink like an incubus upon the good name of the City, and the vicious and lawless become yet bolder and more desperate than now.

May I ask the Courier and Enquirer, who started this commission theory, to look that question in the face, and to see whether, if it be adopted, we shall not have a condition of things here horrible to contemplate. Under the opinions of the law officers of the State Government, those now in power will stand up and defend their right to maintain their places, and, being in possession, it will be difficult to unseat them. The State-appointed Commissioners may go on and organize their departments independent of the held-over locally-created Commissioners; a conflict of authority and jurisdiction manifestly not to be determined short of the Court of Appeals, in the meantime, what becomes of public security, order and protection of property?

Let those who are flattering our City Government with future well behavior, look to this and [illegible] The people will [illegible] to a rapid [illegible] from which they [illegible]. Citizen.

We have already urged these considerations upon the Legislature and the public. Indeed the Times was the first to call attention to the constitutional provision referred to, and this was done considerably in advance of the Attorney-General's opinion. We presume that so formidable an obstacle to the project of governing this City by Commission is not likely to be overlooked, or ignored, by those who, with the power, have also the responsibility of legislation upon the subject. Our City Government needs a radical and thorough reformation,—but to be good for anything, it must be constitutional in its forms, as well as in its substance.

Academy of Music.

If anything were wanting to assure Mme. De Wilhorst that she is a favorite in New-York musical circles, the magnificent house which assembled at the Academy last evening, in her honor, sufficed to establish the fact. Upwards of two thousand tickets were sold, and the house was packed in parquette, balcony and boxes. The Opera was Lucia, presented with the same cast as on its first production by M. Strakosch. Mme. De Wilhorst, having, to all appearance, fully recovered from her severe indisposition, sang with admirable effect, receiving frequent rounds of plaudits, which were not less enthusiastic than sincere. The lady evidently understands the stage peculiarities in much greater perfection than many of her most ardent admirers had deemed possible. She has made a most agreeable impression, and will take rank eventually among the best of artists. In the marriage scene in the second act, her acting has visibly improved. Sig. Morelli displayed animation as well as artistic excellence—the remainder of the cast being much as before. In view of this auspicious inauguration of his second season, M. Strakosch has little ground for apprehension as to the result of his new enterprise. "Trovatore" will be produced on Wednesday, with Mlle. Parepa in the principal role. "Sonnambula" is in active preparation, and it will be gratifying intelligence for the friends of Mme. De Wilhorst to hear that that lady assumes the part of the heroine. Should she make as brilliant a success in that character as she has achieved in her first attempt, her reputation will need little other enhancement.

Laura Keene's Theatre.—A new version of Goethe's "Faust" was produced here last night with moderate success. For this occasion the poet's illegitimate work has been compressed into three acts. Beyond stating this bare fact we shall say nothing of the literary features of the translation, for a more contemptible effort of utter dullness never came beneath our notice. It is too worthless to merit a moment's calm consideration. We prefer quoting what can be praised. There is opportunity in the production of this play to indulge in the highest consideration. It has been placed on the stage with unusual care. The scenery possesses the double merit of being local and thoroughly effective; the costumes are picturesque, and arranged with a greater regard to pictorial contrast than we are accustomed to witness on the stage; the mechanical positions are ingeniously contrived, and although a little stiff worked well for a first night. In the production of this work Miss Keene has given fresh evidence of the possession of rare taste and judgment; everything is done well, without being overdone. Her own dress is a model of chaste simplicity, and looks beautifully in every situation of the play.

The acting was as good as could be expected, considering that no one has a respectable part to sustain. Miss Keene's Margarite was filled with exquisite touches of genuine art. Mr. Wheatleigh as Faust was a little foggy, (no wonder, considering the text,) and Mr. George Jordan as Mephistopheles made that potentate respectable. As a spectacle piece this version or rather perversion of an immortal work, deserves attention, but in no other light. It would, we are sure, be to Miss Keene's interest to withdraw it, until some abler hand has undertaken the very difficult task of arranging a moderately respectable paraphrase of the author's language.

Hon. John C. Breckinridge.

Mr. Breckinridge, the Vice President elect, reached Philadelphia late on Saturday evening, and has taken rooms at M'Kinnon's Merchants' Hotel. He is in fine health and spirits, and never looked better. Everything in the character of Mr. Buchanan is calculated to awaken the interest and enhance the enthusiasm of the people; and we have no doubt our political friends, and indeed, men of all parties, will be happy to make his sojourn among us pleasant.

Vice-President Breckinridge will remain at the Merchants' Hotel for several days.—Philadelphia Press, Monday.

CARD TO THE SUBSCRIBERS.

The management earnestly desires the subscribers to have in mind that by opening the doors before the appointed time it would operate as an injustice to those who, arriving at the appointed hour, would find the best seats already taken. By being punctual, he will have the pleasure of seeing the entire house well filled, and they will save the inconvenience of being kept waiting.

NOTICE.

The management regrets that the advertising in the papers only the Saturday prior to the concerts, will be productive of much inconvenience to strangers, who, arriving at the appointed hour, would find the best seats already taken. By being punctual, he will have the pleasure of seeing the entire house well filled, and they will save the inconvenience of being kept waiting.

Mr. Brown will be happy to attend to any wishes of the ladies.

Association of the Friends of Civil and Religious Liberty—Second Annual Banquet.

The Association of the "Friends of Civil and Religious Liberty" met last night at the Astor House to commemorate, for the second time, the Birthday of Washington. The object of the organization is stated in the invitations to be "to rescue from misrepresentation the talents and enlightened, manly and Christian principles of the beloved Father of his Country, who recognized no sectionalism which might contract the boundaries of our common country—no geographism which might narrow the avenues to the altar of our common Creator—no nationalism which might exclude the faithful pilgrim, wherever born, from the shrine of a common Freedom."

The assemblage of last night was large, and comprised many gentlemen eminent for their talents, influence and position.

The arrangements for the festival were in charge of a Committee composed of Messrs. Isaac Bell, Jr., Isaac Dayton, John H. McCunn, Edward C. West, Richard B. Connolly, and William E. Robinson.

Mr. James T. Brady, the orator of last year and the President for the current year, occupied the Chair.

In pursuance of the plan of proceedings adopted at the inaugural celebration, the Committee of Management addressed an invitation to Senator Douglas to deliver the oration at the present anniversary. The invitation was accepted, but on Sunday the Committee received a dispatch from the Senator announcing his utter inability to comply with the engagement, owing to the pressure of Legislative business. This disappointment was a subject of general regret, although the pleasures of the evening did not appear to have been seriously checked by it.

The banquet, per se, was all that art, luxury and taste combined, could furnish. About 160 gentlemen were present. The President was supported on the right by Mayor Wood, and on the left by Gen. Wadsworth, M. C. Among the guests were John Cochrane, M. C.; G. Geddes Granger and F. C. Maloney, Governors of the Almshouse; Charles Carrigan, Philadelphia; Samuel J. Tilden, Richard O'Gorman, Richard Busteed, Corporation Counsel; Richard B. Connolly, County Clerk; Wm. Judson, Nathaniel Jarvis, Jr., Simeon Draper, Edward C. West, J. B. Kirker, John D. Beardsley, Col. McCunn, Captain Vincent, Major Steen, Augustus Schell, Dr. Raphael, Judges O'Conor, Thompson and McCarthy, Dr. Sanger, Josiah Sutherland, Malcolm, Campbell, Frank Byrne, John Browne, Thomas Bennett, Wm. H. Duscomberry, &c., &c., &c.

Messrs. Montgomery Livingston, Isaac Townsend and Isaac Bell, Jr., were appointed Vice-Presidents.

Messrs. T. F. Meagher, M. Campbell, E. R. Robinson and several others acted as Stewards.

An admirable band filled up the intervals between the responses to the toasts with the choicest and most appropriate music.

Mr. Brady, the President, addressed the company preliminary to the announcement of the list of toasts, and his remarks were received with the most rapturous applause.

The first, second, and third toasts—the President of the United States, the Army and Navy of the United States, and the Governor of the State of New-York, were each received with a round of cheers.

In response to the last, Mr. Robinson read the following telegraphic dispatch, which was received with renewed cheering:

ALBANY, Monday, Feb. 23.

GENTLEMEN: I cannot be present; I regret it, but the sentiments and hopes of my heart are with you.

In reply to the fourth toast, "The Mayor of the City of New-York,"

Hon. FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor, replied. He reviewed the history of New-York as illustrative of her unvarying devotion to the cause of Civil and Religious Liberty, and argued that whilst Boston was roused into action against the mother country only by restrictions on her commerce, New-York took the field for sake of the principle of Liberty. And to have these New-Yorkers had gallantly maintained her established fame, for she never yielded to the storm of Know-Nothing fanaticism. [Loud and prolonged cheering.]

The President then announced the fifth toast, "The Memory of Washington," which was drunk in impressive silence.

Mr. ROBINSON replied in a speech characterized by his customary humor and eloquence. He cited those expressions and actions of WASHINGTON, illustrative of his sentiments in favor of giving office to foreigners, of protecting not only respectable but pauper immigration, and of promoting and perpetuating the principles of civil and religious liberty.

The remaining toasts—"The Constitution of the United States"—"The Union"—"The Bar and the Judiciary"—"The Clergy"—and "Woman," were respectively and eloquently responded to by Mr. CHARLES CARRIGAN, of Philadelphia, Mr. RICHARD BUSTEED, Corporation Counsel, Hon. JOHN COCHRANE, M. C., the Rabbi RAPHAEL, and Mr. THOMAS F. MEAGHER. Towards the close of the entertainment Mr. BRADY withdrew on business, and his place was filled for the remainder of the evening, by Mr. SIMEON DRAPER. The affair passed off very happily.

The O. U. A.'s at the Crystal Palace.

The Order of United Americans held their usual celebration of the birthday of Washington yesterday, at the Crystal Palace. The day was fine, and a large gathering assembled, but those who came to hear must have been sadly disappointed, for the voices of the speakers were only audible within a few feet of the platform. A worse place for hearing could scarcely have been found, for the Palace was built without regard to acoustics, and is far better adapted to fairs than to concerts and orations. A platform was erected in the south nave, just in front of the statue of WASHINGTON, which was heavily draped with flags and occupied by the speakers, vocalists, and some invited guests. The exercises were announced to commence at 11 o'clock, and the people assembled by that time, but the procession did not arrive until after 12 o'clock giving the anxious waiters full time to appreciate the comforts of the open floor of the building. The music, consisting of national airs by SHELTON'S, WALLACE'S, the WASHINGTON Bands, a chorus from the New-York Harmonic Society, and solos by Miss ANDREW and Prof. GARDNER, was excellent, and was the only part of the programme generally enjoyed by the audience.

Rev. J. B. WOOD made the prayer and benediction, and Hon. R. W. ANDREWS delivered the oration of the day. The speaker was much annoyed by the noise, which was so great that he was obliged once or twice to cease for a time, and finally to omit a large portion of his speech. The procession was rather small, much smaller than last year. The Palace was decorated for the occasion, and the fountain was playing merrily, but the scattered statues wore a mournful look, as if recalling the days of departed greatness. But there are some fine pieces of statuary still left, any one of which would repay one for the trouble of a longer ride than to Forty-second-street.

How the Corporation Celebrated Washington's Birthday.

The Mayor, Aldermen, and members of the Common Council of New-York celebrated the natal day of the Father of his Country, in the usual manner, last evening, at the Metropolitan Hall, where 700 persons sat down to a well spread table. Mr. Wood's chair was in the centre. The Mayor entered during the repast, and was warmly welcomed by the majority of the company present. During the processing, the following letter was read from the President elect:

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Feb. 17, 1857.

MY DEAR SIR: I have received your kind invitation, in behalf of the Councils of New-York, to be present at the dinner to be given at the Metropolitan Hall, on the approaching anniversary of the birth of the Father of his country.

I deeply regret that it will not be in my power to enjoy the privilege of attending, because we ought to cherish the memory of this illustrious man as the richest political legacy which has ever been bestowed upon any people. Yours, very respectfully,

JAMES BUCHANAN.

JAMES L. WADE, Esq., Chairman, &c., &c.

Washington's Birthday in Brooklyn.

There was no formal observance of this day in Brooklyn. The public-school children all had a holiday; flags were raised on the City Hall, the hotels and the shipping, and several military companies paraded.

Washington's Birthday in Jersey City.

The day was celebrated yesterday in Jersey City by the Continental Guard, Captain SCHUMACHER, which turned out in strength at 8 o'clock in the morning, and paraded in the principal streets of the city. Last night the Company gave its annual ball at the Hudson House, in honor of the day. The British steamers at the Cunard docks were gaily dressed with flags as a token of respect to the same event.

A $25,000 Lady Going for a Dollar.

The public in general, especially the bachelor public, and the patrons of Mr. PENHAN'S new "Gift Enterprise" in particular, were invited to amuse themselves yesterday with an exhibition which was really invested with the charm of novelty. For the consideration of one dollar, the enterprising law-breakers of both sexes (lotteries being illegal in this State, as in many others) are tempted, among other prizes, with the chance of getting "a well-known marriageable gentleman, with property in his own right, valued at $50,000," and "a beautiful, young and marriageable lady, with property in her own right, valued at $25,000,"—the marriage of the respective parties, the winner and the won, if agreeable to themselves, to take place at the Crystal Palace. If from this wonderful wheel of fortune a married lady shall draw the single gentleman, or if a married gentleman shall successfully invest one hundred cents in the beautiful young lady, or if the lady shall fall to a lady or the gentleman to a gentleman, the disappointment which must naturally ensue will be serenely soothed by an equivalent in money—$5,000 instead of the lady, and $10,000 in place of the gentleman. So at least says Mr. PENHAN, so vouches Ex-Alderman BATCOS, his Prime Minister and Privy Councilor, and who dare contradict them?

To place the matter beyond doubt or contradiction, the public, as we have said, were invited yesterday to witness a most novel scene. At the Chinese Assembly Rooms, during the exhibition of the Seven Mile Mirror, the "beautiful, young and marriageable lady" was introduced to an audience which crowded the building, by the Ex-Alderman of the Thirteenth Ward, and displayed herself on the platform in front of the panorama, a willing candidate for a husband—a prize in a lottery, tickets one dollar. Glancing around the room, we thought that the "marriageable gentleman" would have been the more tempting prize, for more than three-fourths of the audience were ladies. However, there were gentlemen enough to applaud the "beautiful, young and marriageable lady, with $25,000 in her own right" most vociferously, and to demand her reappearance, not exactly in a courteous manner, it is true—such cries as "Bring her out!" "Show her up!" consorting but feebly with the deference which is due to woman even when displaying her charms as a bait for the sale of one-dollar lottery tickets. She came reluctantly forward—so the Ex-Alderman assured the spectators. She only exhibited herself after the strongest solicitations of the managers, that no doubt might exist as to the honest intention and faithful performance of that part of the Gift Contract. The Ex-Alderman, on coming forward to address the audience, was decidedly nervous, and so trembled with a twitching in the joints, in the knees especially, that many spectators mistook him for the "marriageable gentleman," virtuously bashful at offering himself for raffle (tickets one dollar only) to a crowd of ladies, who might immediately after inspecting him, get to hate each other as only lady rivals can. But we, who have the happiness, with our friend BRANCH, to enjoy a familiar acquaintance with the Ex-Alderman, knew him better, and prepared ourselves, when he had made his speech, to welcome the marriageable lady. When he led her forward, not unblushingly, she gracefully smiled and bowed. Then bachelor hearts fluttered (she wore a fawn-colored silk dress;) then bachelor breasts heaved forth deeply-drawn sighs, (a white opera cloak, of the most fashionable style, trimmed with rose-colored ribbon;) then bachelors fingers felt in bachelor pockets for a dollar, federal currency, and not Spanish quarters, (long, dark and most coquettish curls,) and, with the ardour of undying attachment, they resolved the dollar should be ventured. Faint heart never won fair lady. Going for a dollar. Here goes the dollar. They were so determined to invest that amount, that when she appeared a second time in response to a general call, their resolution could not be strengthened. It was already Herculean. Each bachelor beheld himself the possessor of the "beautiful, young, and marriageable lady, with property in her own right, valued at $25,000." The married men who were present, it is not unreasonable to expect, were a little morose and snappish to their wives last night. As for the lady's beauty, it is beyond question; her dress evinced much taste, and her deportment, considering the circumstances, was not open to censure. She is said to hail from one of the New England states. A lady who bears a most startling resemblance to her may often be seen on a fine afternoon in Broadway.

Fires.

IN MADISON-STREET.

At 5¾ o'clock, yesterday morning, a fire broke out in the dwelling of S. C. HERMAN, No. 175 Madison-street. It originated in the kitchen. The entire damage done to furniture and building amounted to about $600. The furniture is insured for $1,500, and the building $3,500 in the Continental Insurance Company.

E. B. BRADY has recently produced an entirely new variety of the Photograph, in which he solicits the attention of the public. A pedestal, the best position for operating, drapery and painting, and accessories in the historical element, form features of the Gallery. It is entirely new in style, extracted from the peculiarity of every or changing age, has elicited the highest praise from distinguished American and European critics.

The public are frequently diverted, by temporary novelties, which from time to time are pressed upon its attention until their worthlessness becomes apparent. These are mostly fabricated from European processes. They are advertised as illegitimate, and their currency tends to throw general discredit upon the art. Scientific experiment during the past few years has demonstrated the Photograph to be the artistical gem of the Camera. It is due to the public, under whose patronage it has become so distinguished a feature of Metropolitan Art, that it should be made acquainted with the instability and inferiority of the processes which, under misleading aims and outré names, solicit attention as novelties.

The production of the Photograph has been vastly simplified. Within the past year, artistic talent of the first order has been enlisted, and owing to these causes, Mr. BRADY is enabled to produce Pictures of every description, of unsurpassed grace and excellence, at prices corresponding with the increased facility of their production.

Every style of Picture is now fixed at a price which places it within universal reach. The readiness with which the Photograph is duplicated renders it valuable to those who desire inexpensive Portraits for friends or relatives. Family Portraits are also copied and duplicated with extreme perfection and facility. In every respect—of permanence, cheapness, rapidity of production and intrinsic excellence—the Photograph is par excellence, fitted to universalize literature.

While in Europe for the past ten years it has been the subject of constant scientific experiment, the recipient of Government patronage, and the divination of thousands of enthusiastic amateurs; while it has been extensively applied to scientific and military purposes, and has received from first to last the warmest support and most appreciative countenance of the press, it is pronounced by competent judges inferior in development to American art. The Photographic Pictures exhibited at Mr. BRADY'S Gallery are said to surpass (as they certainly do any American productions) the rarest exhibitions of the London, Paris, and Vienna salons.

Though convinced that the excellence of the Photographs is such as to entitle it to especial commendation above all other pictures, the resources of BRADY'S establishment enable him to produce any and every style of Picture possible to the Camera. This is for those to whom the novelty of novelty outweighs the merit of established excellence.

LETTERS PATENT, GRANTED JAN. 20, 1857.—A large collection of this new and beautiful style of pentraiture is now on exhibition at J. GURNEY'S well-known Photographic Palace of Art, No. 349 Broadway, New-York.

The public are respectfully invited to call and judge for themselves of the superiority of these pictures over other styles; and although executed by the camera, they combine the truthfulness of the finest photograph with the beauty and finish of the most delicate miniature on ivory. We quote from the expression of one of our most celebrated miniature painters.

"The stereoscopic effect is wonderful; our occupation is gone. These pictures surpass in every respect our best endeavors."

J. GURNEY holds himself in readiness to execute said pictures for the public on and after the 20th inst.

Gallery open from 8 A. M. till 6 P. M.

J. GURNEY, Photographic Artist,
No. 349 Broadway, corner Leonard-street, New-York.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS, A PUBLIC MEDICINE 106 YEARS.—They cure Bilious and Liver Complaints, Dyspepsia and Pains in the Head, Dizziness, Heartburn, which cease as a provective, one or two should be taken with dinner—Heaviness, Wind, Spasms, Worms, flying or settled Pain in the Stomach and Bowels, Colic and Costiveness. The use of BRANDRETH'S PILLS removes pimples, because they purify the blood. Every organ is thus restored to health, and it thus they cure irregularities, making them of inestimable value to females. When they are used, they require no extra care in diet or clothing; the body is, in fact, less liable to take cold after than before the Pills were used. A gentleman of high respectability, whose letter can be seen at the Principal office, writes:

"I am now fifty-two years of age. * * * For twenty years I have used your Pills as my family medicine, and I wish no other; and I have never had occasion to call a physician in my family (save in the sickness of my wife with children) during the twenty years."

Price 25 cents.

Principal Office No. 48 Brandreth Building, Nos. 415 and 417 Broadway, New-York.

Sold at No. 296 Bowery and No. 241 Hudson-st., No. 52 Division-st., No. 66 Houston-st., No. 45 6th-av., No. 175 Fulton-st., Brooklyn, No. 194 South 6th-st., Williamsburg.

PURDY'S NATIONAL THEATRE.—The new local drama by Mr. J. F. POOLE, entitled "Excelsior; or, Life's Struggles," was produced here last evening, and took the audience as if by storm. The house was crowded to overflowing, (as is generally the case at this theatre,) and appeared highly gratified with the performance. The extensive pantomime of the "Red Gauntlet," and another new drama, called "The Yankee," were also satisfactorily received. All three of these pieces will be repeated to-night.

MARINE MATTERS.

CAPT. PATTEN, THE HUSBAND OF "THE WIFE WORTH SAVING."

We learn from Mr. JAMES SULLIVAN, who accompanied Mrs. PATTEN (the young wife who took the Neptune's Car into San Francisco) and her husband to Boston, that they arrived safely at their home, and with much less difficulty than was anticipated. Col. BORDEN, Agent of the Fall River Line, offered the party a free pass, and the officers of the boat made every effort to render their situation as comfortable as possible. The Steward of the Bay State was also particularly attentive to their comfort. At Fall River a special car on the accommodation train was placed at their disposal, into which Capt. P.'s cot could be easily placed, and directions were given to the engineer (and observed) to stop and start the train slowly, so as to occasion as little jarring as possible. Capt. PATTEN spoke intelligently of what was passing, and was evidently conscious that he was on the way home. He gave some precautions about the mode of carrying him into his house, and up the stairs, and when placed upon his mattress in his room, he repeated with evident emotion, "This is home—this is home." There is some hope that he may yet recover, though his sight and hearing will never be restored.

The Free Masons have had more credit, it seems, than they are entitled to in connection with this case. Whilst Mrs. PATTEN expresses her obligation to some individual members of the Order, it is not true that, as a body, they have done anything for Capt. PATTEN or his heroic wife, either at San Francisco or in New-York. They have borne their own expenses, aided by the owners of the ship and their business associates—not by the Masonic fraternity. Mrs. P. makes special mention of JUDAH BERRY, Esq., who met them at the steamer upon their arrival, and spent the day and night in watching by the bedside of her husband, and in other neighborly attentions. The statements made as to their destitution have caused Mrs. P. some pain, as it was very far from her wish to appear before the public as soliciting charity; they "were poor, but not destitute." Still, that their situation is one demanding assistance, must be evident.

SOUND STEAMER.

The Commodore Vanderbilt left for Stonington at her usual hour (4 o'clock) yesterday, and the Empire State for Fall River. The Connecticut, of the Norwich and Worcester line, left at 2 o'clock. The moderate weather has so far softened the ice that no further serious obstruction is apprehended, and regular trips will be resumed.

OUTWARD VOYAGE OF THE ERICSSON.

LIVERPOOL, Sunday, Feb. 1.—Arrived.—The Ericsson (M. S.) LOWNDE, from New-York, at this port. Left on the 17th. The Ericsson reports that on the 16th she experienced a most terrific gale of wind from N. to N. E., and so intensely cold that the ship was completely covered with ice, and large quantities continually knocking about the deck—the ship sustaining no other damage than washing away a small part of her starboard paddle-box.

The Garrotting Business in Brooklyn.

The garrotting business thrives well in Brooklyn. JOHN ELFINA, a peddler, who was garroted and robbed a few days since, in Gowanus, died yesterday from the injuries he then received. None of his murderers have been arrested.

A colored man, just returned from sea, was garroted and robbed of $60, on Third-avenue, Gowanus, on Saturday night last.

A Committee from the New Unitarian Congregational Society, South Brooklyn, visited Boston last week and extended an invitation to Rev. T. STARR KING to become their Pastor. He declined, preferring to remain Pastor of the Hollis-street Society.

By a decision of Judge STRONG, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, yesterday, the Commissioners report on Prospect-square was confirmed. This places it in possession of the city of Brooklyn.

Child Drowned.

A little girl 2 years of age named MARY MCMAHON was drowned in a tub of water at the residence of her parents, No. 112 East Baltic-street, Brooklyn, Saturday, under peculiarly painful circumstances. The father was confined to his bed with sickness, and the mother had gone out for medicine when the child fell into the water, and was drowned in the presence of the father, who was unable to render any assistance. Coroner ERDTMAN held an inquest.

MONDAY, Feb. 23—P. M.

The Official Averages of the Banks in the City of New-York for the week ending Saturday last, Feb. 21, the particulars of which are advertised by each Bank in another page of this paper, exhibit, in the aggregate, the following changes from the previous weekly statement of Saturday, Feb. 14:

Decrease in Loans	$949,237
Decrease in Specie	65,224
Decrease in Circulation	45,735
Decrease in Undrawn Deposits	644,599

The average Specie reserve stands $10,482,158, which is a better showing by nearly half a million than was generally looked for in the Street, from which it seems probable that the interior exchanges brought more Gold, in small parcels, into the City than the New-Orleans steamer carried out. The decreased movement in Loans and Discounts may be esteemed even a more favorable fea-

The reopening of the New-York Central transfers to-day added very considerably to the money transactions between the Brokers, but with this increased movement there was little or no alteration in the freedom of supply as compared with the close of last week. Discounts outside of Bank are a little easier on very prime 60 day acceptances, say 9 ⅌ cent. ⅌ annum, but the general rate on first-class paper, 3 to 4 months, remains at about 10 ⅌ cent. The Foreign Bill market is steady, with no evidences yet of a large business for the Boston steamer, at 108⅝@109⅝ on London; 5.38⅝@5.32⅝ on Paris. The Custom Duties to-day were $185,000. The whole Income of the Sub-Treasury, $597,997; the cargo, $285,112; balance, $15,094,970. The Asia delivered to-day $598,000 Foreign Gold, which goes into Bank to await the next Havana opportunity.

The speculation on the Stock Exchange, for the week, opens with considerable activity. The prevailing disposition among brokers through the forenoon was to sell the market down, except on Illinois Central and Reading shares, which are firmer and higher than on Saturday. At the Second Board and after, prices stiffened up on the general list, and closed much the same as on Saturday, except New York Central which left off 89⅝@89¾, after being down to 88⅝ in the morning. The fluctuations in Erie were from 56⅝ down to 56, and up again to 56
